Applicable to the Associate's Degree. Partially satisfies Specific Area E2 requirement, General Education Requirements 4A, and courses required for the English major. Transferable to CSU in General Education Areas A2 and A3. Transferable to UC and IGETC Area 1A.

5. STUDENT LEARNING OUTCOMES (SLO'S):

Upon completion of the course, students will be able to:

- Overall essay unity/thesis: Write sharply focused, coherent, and well developed essays appropriate to the transfer level that support a self-generated thesis, and demonstrate, in addition to competence in standard English grammar and usage, a command of a variety of organizational strategies appropriate for academic audiences and reflect an informed commitment to conventions of academic discourse.

- Critical reading/writing/thinking: Demonstrate critical reading, writing, thinking and research skills in the development of analytical and evaluative responses to important ideas and arguments from multiple points of view.
- Information literacy: Utilize developed information literacy skills which include executing an effective research strategy using appropriate research tools, evaluating the credibility of sources, and using information ethically by applying conventions of documentation.
- Metacognition: Demonstrate self-critical awareness of their own writing strategies and competencies as they continue to perceive themselves as improved writers, thinkers and student scholars engaged in academic discourse in cross-disciplinary contexts.

6. SPECIFIC INSTRUCTIONAL OBJECTIVES:

During the course, students will be asked to:

A. Develop critical reading skills as they apply to the analysis of expository college-level texts from diverse cultural sources and perspectives:

1. Analyze, interpret, and evaluate a range of college level texts of which two must be book length. Selected texts are used as models of composition for the student.
2. Differentiate fact from opinion in critical and scholarly works.
3. Detect prejudice and recognize the tone used by an author.
4. Introduce deductive and inductive reasoning.
5. Distinguish between and use both denotative and connotative aspects of language.
6. Introduce sound inferences from data given in a variety of forms.
7. Identify some common formal and informal fallacies of language and thought.
8. Identify and analyze structure of arguments and supporting evidence.
9. Identify assumptions and their effect on shaping interpretations.

B. Develop critical writing skills as they apply to the written analysis of college-level texts from diverse cultural sources and perspectives:

1. Create text-based essays at least 4-5 pages in length which cumulatively add up to 8,000-10,000 words (35-40 pages) and which employ writing strategies that emphasize writing tasks such as argumentation, causal analysis, advocacy of idea, persuasion, evaluation, refutation, interpretation, comparison/contrast, and definition. Twenty to 30% of writing should be in-class essays (such as in-class midterms and

- final essay exams).
2. In their essays, students will be expected to:
 - a) use the various stages of the writing process to develop interpretations, analyses, and evaluations of the texts read;
 - b) establish and state clearly a unifying claim or thesis;
 - c) construct sound arguments in support of claims;
 - d) organize essays which support and develop ideas;
 - e) avoid logical fallacies in the presentation of arguments;
 - f) select relevant examples, details, and other evidence from the texts read to support claims;
 - g) anticipate and refute possible objections to claims and arguments;
 - h) continue to develop greater sophistication in using precise diction, writing varied and complex sentences, organizing coherent paragraphs, and writing for a specific audience.
 3. Conduct research which illuminates a given text and which uses effectively quotations, paraphrase and appropriate documentation.
 - a) Write a research-based analytical essay of a length consistent with the official English 100 course outline
 - b) Practice academic integrity and avoid plagiarism.
 4. Use self-evaluation exercises to increase awareness of one's own thinking and learning processes.

C. Develop general critical thinking skills as they apply to analytical discourse:

1. Identify and evaluate the unstated premises and hidden assumptions in public discourse including social, historical, cultural, psychological, and/or gender-based contexts from which they arise.
2. Identify and evaluate the pattern of reasoning present in argument and related critical evaluation, including both induction and deduction.
3. Distinguish between fact, inference, and judgment, recognizing that different reasonable inferences and judgments can be derived from the same facts present in critical commentary and public discourse.
5. Recognize intentions, biases, assumptions, inferences, judgments, and fallacies present in a given argument.

D. Develop information literacy skills as they apply to college-level academic research:

1. Differentiate among the variety of search tools and choose appropriate search tools to find books, articles, and websites.
2. Execute an advanced search using Boolean logic.
3. Interpret search results, including identifying the elements of a bibliographic citation.
4. Evaluate the relevance, quality, authoritativeness and credibility of sources, including books, journals, and websites.
5. Access and use information ethically and legally, including applying correct documentation style.

8. REPRESENTATIVE METHODS OF INSTRUCTION:

- A. A variety of methods will be used, including but not limited to, lecture and discussion, demonstration/ modeling, small group work, individual work with the instructor, computer work, in -class writings, conferences, research project, technology-mediated instruction, and exams.
- B. Create text-based essays at least 4-5 pages in length which cumulatively add up to 8,000-10,000 words (35-40 pages) and which employ writing strategies that emphasize writing tasks such as argumentation, causal analysis, advocacy of idea, persuasion, evaluation, refutation, interpretation, comparison/contrast, and definition. 20-30% should be in-class essays (such as in-class midterms and final essay exams).
- C. Assign other writings which are non-fiction, analytical and/or argumentative, text-based and which reflect contemporary/philosophical concerns.

9. ASSIGNMENTS:

Examples of possible assignments include:

Reading Journals/Reaction Papers:

Teachers assign reading journals to help the student read actively. An active reader engages himself/herself in the material, thinking, questioning and reflecting on the ideas, and making connections between the ideas of the text and his/her own experience.

- A journal entry or reaction paper can be based on responses to questions posed about an assigned reading. Questions can be 1) suggested by the instructor, or, 2) created by the student. Questions should be designed so that it produces independent lengthy responses (at least one paragraph), rather than short answers.
- Journals/reaction papers can also include students thoughts and freewrites on an idea or concept suggested by class content and/or assigned reading.

- Journals can be used as a means for instructors to dialog with students or for students to dialog with each other.

Essay topics: Essays are written in response to the class readings. Clear and detailed writing prompts should be given with every essay assignment.

- Essay Topic 1: In a 4-5 page essay, address the following: Select a social or political trend or movement that affects our society today. Show reasons why the trend/movement exists and its effects on the public. Use examples from class readings, observations and material from outside sources. Use appropriate citation form.
- Essay Topic 2: In a 4-5 page essay, address the following: Select a social or political issue that has two well-defined sides, each having a valid point of view. Establish your point of view clearly in the thesis and construct an essay which defends the thesis. Offer a solution, or a new way of looking at the problem, keeping in mind short and long term repercussions of the solution, its feasibility and the possible ethical consequences. Also include one or several counterarguments which present both an opponent's concern, along with a comprehensive refutation. Use class readings, other materials to strengthen support and use appropriate citation form.

Proofreading, organizational and editing skills:

- Sentence combining in more complex form, grammar practice as needed, in context of writing.
- Practice/review in placing quotes, statistics and paraphrasing into context of writing.
- Creating complex outlines appropriate for the assigned papers.
- Collaborative group work to edit and proofread peer writing.
- Online, CD and lab supplemental exercises.

10. EVALUATION OF STUDENT PERFORMANCE:

English 100 is a letter-graded course.

Letter grade will be based on:

- Essays: Organized, coherent, unified essays the majority of which will be text-based and written both in class and outside of class.
- Journals: Written responses to readings and class discussions.
- Oral Participation: Active participation in class discussions demonstrating understanding of and response to the reading. Also can include group or individual oral presentations.
- Quizzes: Adequate comprehension of material.
- Homework: Completed assignments focusing on particular English writing skills, such as freewriting, brainstorming, outlining, answering guided questions, organizing information into charts, scaffolding research assignments and evaluating sources.

- Final Exam: Demonstrated competence in text-based essay writing, using standard English.

Multiple methods of evaluating and measuring student performance will be used to arrive at letter grade including but not limited to, rubrics and holistic grading. Evaluation of student includes quality and originality of his/her writing assignments, clarity of ideas, correct use of academic conventions and syntax. Quality of participation also may be a part of the total grade.
